

Not even a darting hawk, the quickest thing on wings, could keep the ship's pace as on she ran, cutting the swells at top speed, bearing a man endowed with the gods' own wisdom, one who had suffered twenty years of torment...

Homer, "The Odyssey"